- State Department attorneys advised that they have been given notice that the International Court of Justice (ICJ) will issue its decision in the Nicaragua mining case on 26 November. State Department lawyers are pessimistic about our prospects for a favorable decision on whether or not the Court has jurisdiction to hear Nicaragua's complaint about U.S. mining and other activities directed against Nicaragua. The State Department is preparing press guidance. The guidance in the event of an unfavorable decision will be that the decision is political and wrong based on several precedents.

- D/PAO informed Ben Bradlee that the Agency could not respond to his request for a statement that the Post has always protected agent identities. PAO acknowledged his personal assistance to the Agency on some sensitive source problems but said that the Agency could not provide the statement Bradlee requested because the first Identities Act suit, which we hope to bring, involves the Washington Post. Bradlee was horrified at that prospect and said he fully understood our inability under the circumstances to assist him. D/PAO will inform Peter Teeley, Vice President Bush's Public Affairs Office, of the above. Bradlee has made the same request to Bush that he made to us and is deferring action until he sees how we make out with Bradlee. Bradlee has also queried Dick Helms.

DCI WEEKLY REPORT

PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

The press statement we issued on 21 November on the Agency's filing of a complaint with the FCC concerning ABC's Ronald Rewald broadcasts received excellent, expanded treatment in the NEW YORK TIMES, front page coverage in the WASHINGTON TIMES and reasonable handling in the WASHINGTON POST. Joel Brinkley of the NEW YORK TIMES thought that the NEW YORK TIMES officials in New York City would interpret this action against ABC also as a warning to the TIMES, given my recent complaints to the paper about their failure to respond to my requests for correction of some of its reporting concerning the Agency. The TIMES' Washington Bureau is at odds with its New York headquarters concerning this issue, and I am told the Bureau is on our side.

I informed Ben Bradlee that the Agency could not respond to his request for a statement that the POST has always protected agent identities. I acknowledged his personal assistance to the Agency on some sensitive source problems but said that the Agency could not provide the statement he requested because the first ever Identities Act suit, which we hope to bring and which we hope will lead to a conviction, involves the WASHINGTON POST. He was horrified at that prospect and said he fully understood our inability under the circumstances to assist him. I will inform Peter Teeley, Vice President Bush's Public Affairs Officer, of the above. Bradlee has made the same request to Bush that he made to us and is deferring action until he sees how we make out with Bradlee. Bradlee has also queried Dick Helms.

Visits and Appearances

General Morrison, Executive Vice President of the Security Affairs Support Organization (SASA), reported that Bob Gates' appearance before SASA was much appreciated. Morrison said that Gates had "said all the right things and used all the right jargon." Morrison also expressed his thanks to you, John McMahon, Public Affairs and the Agency for the support it continues to provide SASA.

Academic Relations and Presentations

[redacted] visited the University of Georgia 19-20 November, spoke to about 40 students, members of the International Relations Club, on "Intelligence and Policy," and two Political Science honors classes of about 50 students each on "Intelligence Producer-Consumer Relations." There was no heckling or other problems. All went well.
